SPRINGFIELD, KY., WEDNESDAY, MAY 26, 1909.

CIRCUIT COURT

Convened Monday.—Few Minor Cases Disposed Of.—List Of Jurors.

Circuit Court convened Monday with Judge I. H. Thurman presiding. After the grand jury had been empaneled the charge was given to them by the court. Judge Thurman's instructions were, as usual, strong and lucid. He stated that it mattered not what their opinion of a law might be if sufficient proof of its violation were given them they should indict. Judge Thurman illustrated how one section of the county might not believe in the stock law, another in the seining law, etc., and if one offense should not be investigated then others probably would not be until our affairs would generally be in a chaotic state. It was further shown that it was the duty of the grand jury to investigate and indict if they believe that an offense had been committed, inasmuch as the grand jury is the only agency by which certain offenses can be reached, that is felonies.

The Judge stated that the law required him to call attention to certain statutory offenses, after which he charged the jury as to these, namely, Seining, dynamiting and poisoning streams; disturbing public worship, carrying concealed deadly weapons, probably the most important of any; shooting on the public highway and gambling. Judge Thurman also touched upon the liquor laws, explaining them and the different offenses that could be committed thereunder. The charge consumed about an hour and was given the closest attention.

The following compose the grand jury:

GRAND JURY.

Jas. H. Mayes, Foreman; Dan Kelly, Clerk; C. T. Logsdon, Sheriff; Wm. Rudd, John Hall, C. L. Price, Luc Cornish, Geo. Cocanougher, G. W. Fenwick, D. P. Casteel, Ellis Steele, J. W. Barker.

Mr. John A. Polin, who recently passed the bar examination at La Grange, was on Monday admitted to practice law at the local bar.

Only two cases were tried in Circuit Court yesterday. The first was that of the Commonwealth vs. Geo. Prather charged with poisoning the hogs of another, a felony. After the Commonwealth had closed its testimony the defense moved for peremptory instructions and the motion was sustained by the court. The other case was that of the Commonwealth vs. Luther Barlow charged with furnishing liquor to a minor. In this case the jury was unable to agree and was discharged.

Base Ball.

The local fans of Poortown have been treated to several good games of ball this season, likewise some uncomprehensibly mean ones.

A few days ago the Springfield team defeated the Litsay team in a closely contested game, and decided the Poortown players were an easy mark, but they have another thought coming.

On the afternoon of the 22nd the Springfield boys came out with defeat dimly written on their countenances, and returned with defeat more conspicuous.

Those Poortown guys know how to play ball and never lose interest in the game. It's "play ball" from start to finish. One of their players assigned the reason of Springfield's defeat, as the fact that Springfield simply played worse ball than the local team, but neither team played extra ball.

Rogers pitched the first inning for the visiting team, but the locals looked his curves and marked up five scores. Tommy Colvin pitched the remaining eight innings. Haynes held the opposing batters at his mercy and only allowed an occasional hit.

The game dragged for considerable time, Poortown always in the lead. The game ended 26 to 15, and another game up the percentage column for the Litsay League. Litsay will return the game at the High School Park Saturday.

Surprise Party.

On last Friday evening the young people of Springfield gave a surprise party at the home of Mrs. Ida Clarkson in honor of John Handy, who left Saturday morning for Kansas City, Mo., to accept a position.

Among those who attended were: Misses, Nellie Simms, Mary Haydon, Frances Martin, Annie McChord, Margie Graham, Eleanor Duncan, Wilhelmina Hertlein, Nell Greene, Naomi Rogers, Sarah O'Nan, Isa Colvin, Mabel Williams, Lizzie Logsdon, Lell Roberts, Mesdames Ida Clarkson, G. C. Wharton and Fleece Bosley, Messrs. Joe Wycoff, John Polin, Louis Kelly, John Handy, Murray Floyd, Jakey Smith, Harry Kreckler, Chris Hertlein, Wallace Rogers, Bryant Miller, Owen Goodloe, Tom Colvin, A. R. Shultz, Joe Logsdon, Connor Williams, Lawrence O'Bryan, Morrison O'Nan, Will F. Simms, Wathen Simms, E. J. Willett and Frank Peters.

The party was an enjoyable affair and all those present report a happy evening.

Music was furnished on the piano by Mrs. Fleece Bosley and several solos were sung by Miss Mary Haydon and Mr. Harry Kreckler.

OBITUARY

Mr. J. A. Bishop Dies at Bloomfield.—Mr. Joseph Carrico Dies of Paralysis.

To many old friends and acquaintances in Washington county the report of the death of Mr. John A. Bishop came as a shock and was the source of great grief. Mr. Bishop died at his home at Bloomfield yesterday morning of paralysis.

Save the last few years the deceased had spent his entire life in Washington county. His home was near Mt. Zion and for years he was Magistrate in the Mooresville Magisterial district. He was not only a man of high honor but was a successful business man and had acquired considerable property.

Mr. Bishop is survived by his widow, his second wife, who prior to her marriage to Mr. Bishop was Mrs. Mattie A. Gist, and by Mr. S. H. Bishop, of this place.

The funeral services were conducted at Mt. Zion church this morning.

Mr. Joseph Carrico, a well known citizen of this county, died at his home a few miles from Springfield, this morning at one o'clock. Mr. Carrico had been a sufferer from paralysis and his death was not unexpected.

Mr. Carrico was 60 years of age and was the son of the late Wm. J. Carrico who was one of the wealthiest men of the county. Mr. Carrico married Miss Nell Johnson, who, with one son, Mr. Damon Carrico, survives the deceased. The funeral services will be held at St. Rose tomorrow.

Sells Some Good Ones.

Enterprise: Sam C. Mackin during the past week sold to W. S. King, of Greensburg, N. C., a pair of nice geldings, closely mated, for $700. Both geldings were sired by Chestnut Daro, owned by B. B. Leachman, of Springfield. Mr. Mackin also sold a fancy saddle gelding to J. C. Grigg, of Brazil, Ind., for $300, and a combined gelding to Delaney and Murphy, of Chicago, Ill., for $250.

Odd Cane.

Harrodsburg Herald: Mr. George W. RoBards, of this city, has come into the possession of a cane of which he is justly proud. It is made of an osage orange stick and was hand-carved by a negro paralytic of Washington county. It is most ingeniously carved with all sorts of figures of tools and implements used on a farm. Plows, shovels, saddles, axes, locks, a square and compass, a ladder and various other shapes not ordinarily found on an article of this kind are cut on its sides. It is a most unique object and struck the eye of Dr. John RoBards on one of his visits through the country. He got possession of it and presented it to Mr. G. W. RoBards. One of the features which make this cane so unusual is the fact that it was carved by a man who had no use whatever of his left hand and was compelled to hold the stick between his side and shoulder while shaping the odd forms which are now on it.

People Will Talk.

You may get through the world, but 'twill be very slow, If you listen to all that is said as you go; You'll be worried and fretted, and kept in a stew, For meddlesome tongues will have something to do, For people will talk.

If quiet and modest you'll have it presumed That your humble position is only assumed; You're a wolf in sheep's clothing, or else you're a fool, But don't get excited, keep perfectly cool, For people will talk.

If generous and noble they'll vent out their spleen, You'll hear some loud hints that you're selfish and mean; If upright and honest, and fair as the day, They'll call you a rogue in a sly, sneaking way, For people will talk.

And then, if you show the least boldness of heart, Or a slight inclination to take your own, They'll say you're a pining jay giddy and vain; But keep straight ahead, don't stop to explain, For people will talk.

If treacherous your dress, or old-fashioned your hat, Someone will surely take notice of that, And hint rather strong that you can't pay your way; But don't get excited, whatever they say, For people will talk.

If you dress in the fashion, don't think to escape, For they criticize then in a different shade; You're ahead of your means, or your tailor's unpaid; But mind your own business, there's naught to be made, For people will talk.

Now the best way to do is to do as you please, For your mind, if you have one, will then be at ease, Of course you'll meet with all kinds of abuse, But don't think to stop them; it ain't any use, For people will talk.

—The Trestle Board.

Remembrance.

...BY EDWIN CARLILE LITSEY...

Far in the South I know a garden's close, Where leaves of tropic plants gleam glossy green; Where nothing that will fret is heard or seen, And unseen melody forever flows.

There, richly opulent, strange blooms unfold Their petals; yellow, crimson, white and cream. There bubble-laden, glides a crystal stream, And vaguely circling 'round a wall—so old!

There, bowered 'mid the flowers of the South, I saw her first, her beauty poppy crowned; And there, where swooning blossoms strewed the ground, I tasted first the dectar of her mouth!

The mad, glad nights of joy! The white moon there A priest to shrive us if our love was wrong; The passion of a hidden night-bird's song; The unbound glory of her golden hair!

CLOSING EXERCISES

Of St. Catharine of Sienna Academy to Be Held at the Academy June 15.

The Eighty-seventh Annual Commencement Exercises of St. Catharine of Sienna Academy, near Springfield, Ky., will take place on Tuesday morning at 9:30 o'clock, June 15, 1909.

The sisters extend a cordial invitation to all friends, as well as to members of the St. Catharine of Sienna Alumnae Association, to be present on this day. The Banquet of the Alumnae will be served immediately after the close of the Exercises, and this function will be followed by the annual business meeting at which officers for the coming year, will be elected.

Save Your Early Pullets.

"The time for selling spring chickens will soon be here and many are going to make the serious mistake of selling their first pullets," said a well known chicken fancier to an Enterprise representative yesterday. "This by all means should be avoided, as it is the early hatch that lays the fall and winter eggs. It must be remembered that a pullet begins laying about the time it is full grown and fully matured. The early birds usually get their growth about the first of October, and by November begin laying, and keep it up throughout the winter. The late hatch seldom begins laying before February, and must be well cared for to begin at even this late date. This means a loss of time and money as, generally speaking, a decline in the price of eggs sets in February and rapidly works down until the bottom has been reached. Then the croaker begins to bemoan his bad luck—that of never having eggs to sell except when the market is low. My advice to those who want to get big money for their eggs next fall and winter is to pay little attention to the fancy price which will soon be offered for early spring chickens, for I believe that it will be to the raisers interest to hold them.

Death of a Young Woman.

Mrs. Henry Isham died at the home of her mother, Mrs. Mary Taylor, on Monday, May 17 at 10 o'clock.

About fourteen months ago Mrs. Isham was taken ill of that dreadful and never failing disease, consumption and her decline, has been very rapid, her death having been expected for some time.

Mrs. Isham was born December 12, 1890, was married October 21, 1908, and departed this life May 17, 1909. Besides her husband and mother she leaves three brothers, Heed, Hannibal and Hebran; one half brother, Mr. Geo. Taylor, of Deep Creek; one sister, Mrs. Lorna Boswell, and one half-sister, Mrs. Joe Goode, of Texas. Her father preceded her to the grave about three years ago. Mrs. Isham had been a consistent member of the Baptist Church for nearly three years. The funeral services were conducted at Battle and her remains were laid to rest in the Battle cemetery.

A loved one from us has gone, A voice we loved is stilled; A place in our hearts is vacant in our home, That never can be filled.

—A Cousin.

Forged Checks.

A rather slick and unscrupulous stranger has been working in Springfield lately. Not long since Mr. Geo. Mullican, finding that he was overdrawn in the bank when he thought he had a surplus on deposit, made an investigation and discovered that his name had been forged to several checks and for amounts aggregating $61. The checks were taken from Mr. Mullican's private check book and were made payable to G. C. White. They were endorsed to other parties, among the number being Mr. Woodson Moss, of Winchester, who formerly managed the Walton at this place. A traveling man by the name of the payee in the checks has recently been here representing himself as a salesman for the Van Camp Packing Co., of Indianapolis, Ind. It is reported that while here he gave Wharton & Tapp a check on a Chicago bank for $10, which was returned marked fraudulent. The forger has not as yet been apprehended.

Won Honors.

Messrs. Jack McChord and John Shuck McElroy, Jr., were members of the victorious Central University team in the debate with Georgetown College at Danville Monday night. The subject of debate was "Resolved That the Fifteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution Should be Repealed." Central University had the negative. This was but one of a series of victories for the home boys in oratorical contests and debates.

Jack McChord has also been honored by being named as Valedictorian of his class. This is a signal honor as the Valedictorian is the member of the graduating class who has had the best general average for the four years of study. Mr. McChord has led his class from the freshman through the senior year.

The Valedictory address will be delivered on June 9.

GRADED SCHOOL

Holds Annual Commencement Exercises at Opera House Tuesday Evening.

The Springfield High School gave its annual commencement at the Opera House last night. It is needless to say that the children had been well trained by Prof. Colvin and his able corps of assistants and that all acquitted themselves in the most creditable manner.

A large crowd was in attendance and showed their appreciation by the applause given the different children. The musical numbers were especially popular. The chorus was well trained while the double vocal quartette was especially good. The Balcony Scene from Romeo and Juliet, given by Ricketts Boulware and Miss Susanna Hays was beautifully staged and intelligently presented.

There were no graduates this year, consequently no valedictory address and no presentation of diplomas.

TATHAM SPRINGS.

Miss Margie Carey, the six-year-old daughter of Mr. Ivan Carey, while fishing last week fell into the river. No one was present to render assistance, but being near enough to the shore to hold to some projecting rocks she managed to climb out of the water, though at that point it was several times her depth.

Little Margie Hungate, the one-year-old child of Mr. J. H. Hungate, happened to a painful accident one day last week. Her two sisters, aged 8 and 10 years, were up stairs playing with the little one when she managed to get over the window sill and fell to the ground. She received no serious injuries, but one knee was painfully bruised.

Master Charles Reynolds, aged two years, the little son of Mr. William Reynolds, was attempting to cut some wood last Friday, when instead of letting the ax strike the wood it struck his foot, inflicting a very painful cut.

Mr. Clarence McMillan and Miss Ada Carn, of Sharpville, spent Sunday at Tatham.

Dr. J. B. Yates was in Springfield Monday.

Mrs. Bailey Pinkston visited here Monday.

TOBACCO FIRM

Leases The Re-Drying Plant From The Washington County Warehouse Co.

The Washington County Warehouse Co. has leased to the J. P. Taylor Co., of Henderson, N. C., their re-drying plant just below town for a period of one year. The J. P. Taylor Co. is a large concern and has four branch houses in Kentucky. They will use the leased premises for handling and drying the tobacco which they buy and will also re-dry any tobacco which the public may desire.

Work on the new warehouse to be used as a loose leaf market, will be begun at once. The Warehouse Co. this year will be prepared to sell, store, or bundle tobacco in any manner that the grower may desire. If there should be a revival of the pool, the Warehouse Co. can attend to the tobacco. If anyone wishes to store his tobacco he will be given the opportunity while the market will be as good as any in the State.

Lawn Fete.

On the afternoon and evening of Thursday, June 3, at the Grundy Presbyterian Orphans Home will be held a Lawn Fete, to which every one is most cordially invited. Open house from 3 p. m. to 10 p. m. A ball game between the Springfield boys and the boys of the Grundy Home will be called at 3:30 p. m. Many other things are being planned for the entertainment of the visitors. Refreshments served at stated hours for 25c. The proceeds of the evening go to swell the fund on hand with which to purchase a wagonette for the children of the home. A large attendance is expected.

House Burned.

Mr. Thos. A. Medley, who formerly lived here, but who now resides in Owensboro, suffered quite a serious loss last week when his house burned. The fire broke out about 11 a. m. when no one save Mrs. Medley and the little children was at home. By the time the fire department arrived the fire was beyond control and the house a total wreck. Aside from losing their home Mr. and Mrs. Medley suffered the loss of their household furniture and clothing. The insurance $3,750 will not cover the loss of the building.

Closes Successful Revival.

The revival meeting held during the past two weeks at Mt. Zion by Rev. R. Johnson, of Wilmore, was closed Sunday evening with a very deep and impressive sermon.

This meeting was by far the best held at Mt. Zion for several years, and much good was accomplished. Besides a number who joined the church, scores were deeply impressed and acknowledged their willingness to lead better lives.

Rev. Everson, pastor at that place, deserves special praise for his interest and untiring efforts to further the interest of his church and congregation. Rev. Johnson returned to Wilmore Monday.

A Japanese Strawberry Omelet.

"A Japanese cook taught me the other day how to make a strawberry omelet," says Fannie Merritt Farmer in Woman's Home Companion for June. "Wash and pick over one pint of strawberries. Cut in halves, put in an earthen bowl, and add one third of a cupful of powdered sugar, one half teaspoonful of vanilla, one tablespoonful of water and a few grains of salt. Let stand in a warm place fifteen minutes. Beat eight eggs slightly, and add one half cupful of cream, two tablespoonfuls of sugar and one half teaspoonful of salt. Put two tablespoonfuls of butter in a hot omelet-pan, and when melted, pour in the egg mixture. As it cooks, prick and pick up with a fork until the whole is of a creamy consistency. Place on a hotter part of the range, that it may brown quickly underneath. Before folding and turning on a hot platter add one half the prepared strawberries; sprinkle with two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar, and pour around the remaining strawberries. The strawberries may also be used with your ordinary French omelet recipe."

The Poultry Yard.

The louse is a night hawk.

Rush the bruiers along. The quicker you can get them on the market the better for you.

What is prettier than a bunch of thirty chicks, all of one color and breed and as much alike as so many peas.

As every chick hatched carries the blood of the male, it is important that great care be taken in selecting the head of the flock.

Hens feel the warm weather as much as other folks. Give them a shady place to sit down in once in a while and rest. They will do all the better for it.

Some folks think that hens do not need oyster-shells when they can run wild. Just try giving them some and see how that is. You will be wiser after that.

My method for keeping lice from troubling the poultry at night is to surround the roosting poles by wires from the rafters of the house. If the poles are smooth, the lice will not remain on them if they are there at all.

Turkey hens are profitable until five years old, but it is a good plan to change the gobblers every year. It requires twenty-eight days to hatch a turkey egg, and seven eggs are considered a setting. The nests should be on the ground.

"Advertising was a great invention," said the successful business man. "I wonder who was the first to advertise his manufactures." "There's no exact data on the subject," answered the farmer, "but I guess the hen's the person you're looking for."

A fowl house should not be a foul house. Wake up and clean up. Lice and disease germs thrive in filth. When cleaning up look in the cracks and crevices about the walls and roosts for mites. These pests do not stay on the birds except when hunting for blood.

We reap what we sow. The fruit of a reful feeding and house is young stock ready for market while prices are good. Fowls intended for early market should be kept in close quarters just light enough so they can see to eat. For a fattening ration we like cornmeal and ground oats best.

Enters Suit For Damages.

Harrodsburg, Ky., May 22.—Dr. W. Horace Witherspoon, physician in charge of the Mercer County Poor Farm, on Friday filed suit for $1,995 damages in the Circuit Court against Mrs. Caroline Bartlett Crane, of Kalamazoo, Mich., the noted lecturer on "Civic Righteousness," who is making a tour of inspection of Kentucky. She delivered an address at the Methodist Church here Thursday night, and the suit grows out of sensational charges made by Mrs. Crane in her lecture following an investigation of sanitary conditions Thursday afternoon.

In her address she is alleged to have said that the County Physician was professionally derelict in that he had permitted dirt and filth at the poor farm, that owing to his incapable conduct of affairs at the county farm, as its physician he was undeserving of the salary paid him by the county.

The filing of the suit has caused something of a sensation here. Mrs. Crane has employed Senator W. W. Shapenon to defend her, and she will likely have the backing of the State Board of Health and State Federation of Women's Clubs.

Daniel Horton Shot To Death.

Marion County Leader: Daniel Horton was shot and killed by William Shipp in Taylor county Saturday afternoon. We learn that Horton, who was drinking heavily and armed with a shotgun and pistol, in company with his 13-year-old son, went to the home of Shipp and ran his family from the house. At that time it seems that Shipp was not at home, but soon made his appearance and Horton leveled his gun on him. Shipp was too quick for Horton and jerked a 44 caliber revolver and shot him dead. Immediately Horton's boy pulled his knife and dashed at Shipp, cutting him severely on the face. The man behind the forty-four, not wanting to harm the lad, ran from the enraged youth, who seized his father's gun lying by his dead body and fired at Shipp as he sped away, but the shot missed its mark. Shipp went to Campbellsville and surrendered to the authorities. It is generally believed that the killing was done in self defense.

Horton was known here as a very dangerous man and has frequently been in trouble. Shipp is about 21 years of age and is said to be of a quiet and inoffensive nature, and his deed Saturday afternoon has caused no overflow of tears in this section.

About 11 years ago the dead man's brother, Lloyd Horton, and William Shipp's father, Robert Shipp, met in the road on Muldraugh's Hill and fought a duel with pistols, both duelists being killed. It was the same pistol that was used by Bob Shipp in this battle that his son William used in laying low Dan Horton the other day.

Our Manly Training of Girls.

Our training of girls approaches close to the ideal, claims Katherine Eggleston in Woman's Home Companion for June. The average girl, from the minute she leaves her dolls to go to kindergarten, till she matriculates at college, is told about men and men's work—never about women. The kindergarten songs and tales are about Lincoln and Washington—and even the pictures of animals show the lion and forget the lioness. In older childhood she is taught to build sand forts instead of good old-fashioned mud pies, and even the sums in arithmetic dwell on "Billy's" marbles and "John's" apples, to the total neglect of "Mary's" dolls.

Later still she goes to high school and learns history with all its ideals of brave men—and here again the woman's share of quiet courage is completely overshadowed. She learns carpentering, although she cannot cook an egg or sew a seam. And finally, her education finished, she knows all about the higher mathematics and is short-changed by the butcher. She learns political economy, but doesn't know who are the members of her own school board. Miss Eggleston's bright article concludes:

"If your boy wanted to be a lawyer, and a neighbor told you to put him to work in a carpenter's shop by way of preparation, you would think your neighbor crazy. But you do not consider yourself crazy when you train your daughter, who is to be a wife and mother (and nothing can get away from the grim statistics that women do marry, despite economic independence, the higher education and all other arguments in favor of coeducation), precisely as you train your son, who will enter some profession or trade, there to first earn his own living, and then to provide for a family yet unborn. The one to bear the family and to rear it, the other to provide shelter and comfort for the mother of that family, and yet both trained precisely in the same way."

Heart Troubles

The heart may be weak just the same as the eyes, stomach or other organs. It often happens that a person is born with a weak heart. Then again disease, fevers, over-exertion, anxiety, nervousness, rheumatism, etc. weaken the heart. The result is shortness of breath, palpitation, pain in the heart, or in some of the nerves of the chest or abdomen. The heart should be strengthened with a tonic, and for this nothing equals Dr. Miles' Heart Cure.

"I had a terrible heart ailment. I thought it was a mild form. I was weak, could hardly go about, and a good deal of the time sort of an asthmatic breathing and extremely nervous. I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and within a few days I felt so much better in every way. I am so thankful that I began taking this medicine, and shall not hesitate to tell others how much good it has done me."

Negro's Unique Plea Successful.

Louisville Times: Crittenden Scott, a negro, was in Police Court to-day to answer to a grand larceny charge for the alleged theft of jewelry from Witte Moore, colored, his mistress, after her death. The case was dismissed by Judge McGee.

The testimony showed that Scott had removed a necklace from the body of the Moore woman after her death and had put it about his own neck; that he had taken keys from under her pillow and unlocked her trunk and taken articles of value from it, and that he had pawned some of these articles. In all it was alleged that Scott took two diamond rings valued at $80 each and one diamond ring valued at $75, two necklaces, one with a locket set with diamonds, a gold bracelet and gold watch, together with about $15 in money.

Scott's arrest was caused by Charles Pryor, colored, administrator of the estate. The case was prosecuted by F. Blackwell, attorney for the estate. When Blackwell closed the prosecution, Delos Rogers, attorney for Scott, made a motion for dismissal on the ground that the property alleged to have been stolen was without owner from the time of the woman's death until the Chancery Court ordered it delivered to the administrator. Judge McGee dismissed the case on this ground.

A Business Proposition

Did you ever stop to think, Mr. Business Man, that the news of your business is as much a part of the local events as a wedding or a church fair? The ladies are just as much interested in a new fabric you have on the shelves as they are in any home happening. Your store news and announcements in these columns will reach a large circle of eager buyers. This will enable you to sell your goods while they are new and fresh and you will not have to sacrifice later on remnant counter prices. Think it over.

Liver Trouble

Remedy Free

Any intelligent person can be his own doctor in the ordinary case of liver trouble, for the symptoms cannot be mistaken. If the white of the eye becomes yellowish, if the skin becomes sallow, if pimples and blotches appear, if the bowels do not move, if you have sick headache, if you are bilious, you may be sure that your liver is torpid or inactive.

The quickest and surest remedy yet found for the cure of liver trouble or any of its symptoms is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. The great herb laxative compound. This wonderful remedy is not only a laxative, but a tonic as well. It will start the flow of gastric juice, thereby soon enabling the liver to do its work naturally. A bottle of this great liver remedy can be bought of any druggist for 50 cents or $1. and in many cases a single bottle has cured a chronic case. For example, John W. Lee, 619 S. Pennsylvania ave., Indianapolis, Ind., had a liver trouble, with pimples, blotches, jaundice, etc., and it cured him. Mrs. H. Fincham, Jackson, Ky., says the name of it. Thousands of families keep it in the house against just such an emergency, as you can never tell when some member of the family will need a good laxative.

In order to have you or any other sufferer from the liver make a test of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin without personal expense, Dr. Caldwell will send you a free test bottle if you will send your name and address. The sample will show you how pleasant it is to take, how gently it works. It will start you on the cure of your trouble and convince you that you have found a cure. That is the object of the sample, and the doctor urges you to send for it today.

There is nothing about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 550 Caldwell bldg., Monticello, Ill.

CHAPTER VII.

M ANDY had secretly enjoyed the commotion caused by the little circus rider being left in the parsonage, at first because of her inborn love of mischief and later because Polly had become second in her heart only to the pastor. She went about her work as of old, softly during the days of Polly's convalescence. The deep, steady-voice of the pastor reading aloud in the pretty window overhead was company. She would often climb the stairs to tell them some bit of village gossip and leave them laughing at a quaint comment about some inquisitive sister of the church who had happened to incur her displeasure.

As spring came on Douglas carried Polly down to the small garden beneath the window, and Mandy nattered about arranging the cushions with motherly solicitude.

More days slipped by and Polly began to creep through the little, soft leaves at the back of the church and to look for the deep, blue, sweet scented violets. When she was able Douglas took her with him to visit some of the outlying houses of the poor. Her woman's instinct was quick to perceive many small needs in their lives that he had overlooked and to suggest simple, inexpensive joys that made them her devoted friends.

Their evenings were divided between making plans for these unfortunates and reading aloud from the Bible or other books.

When Polly gained courage, Douglas sometimes persuaded her to read to him, and the little corrections that he made at these times soon became noticeable in her manner of speech. She was so eager, so started for knowledge that she drank it as fast as he could give it. It was during their talks about grammar that Mandy generally fell asleep in her rocker, her unfinished sewing still in her lap.

When a letter came from Jim and Toby it was always shared equally by Mandy and Hasty, Polly and the pastor. But at last a letter came from Jim only, and Douglas, who was asked to read it, faltered and stopped after the first few words.

"It's no use my tryin' to keep it from you any longer, Polly," the letter began. "We ain't got Toby with us no more. He didn't have no accident; it wasn't that. He just seemed kinder sick an' allin' like ever since the night we had a party here. I used to get him warm drinks an' things an' try to pull him through, but he was always a-chillin' and a-chin'. If it wasn't one thing it was another. I done all I knowed you'd 'a' wanted me to, an' the rest of the folks was kinder white to him too. I guess they kinder felt how lonesome he was. He couldn't get no more laughs in the show, so Barker had to put on another man with him. That kinder hurt him, too. I s'pose, an' showed him the way that things was a-goin'." It was just after that he wrote the parson a-tellin' him to never let you come back. He seemed to 'a' got an idee in his head that he was happier where you was. He wouldn't let me tell you 'bout his feelin' rocky, 'cause he thought it might mebbe much to it—he just seemed tired an' peace-like. 'I'm glad he wrote what he did,' he said, meenin' the parson. 'She knows, she knows,' he whispered, meenin' you, Polly, an' then he was on his way. He'd already give me what was saved up for you, an' I'm sendin' it along with this—' A blue money order for $250 had fluttered from the envelope when Douglas opened it.

"I got everything ready afore I went on the next day, an' I went up an' saw the little spot on the hill where they was goin' to show him. It looked kinder nice, an' the digger's wife said she'd put some flowers on it now an' then. It was you what made me think o' that, Polly, 'cause it seemed to me that you would 'a' done. 'You was almos' so daffy about flowers, you an' him."

"I guess this letter's too long for me to be a-sayin' much about the show, but the 'leap-a-death' girl got her'n last week. She wasn't strong enough for the job nohow. I done what I could for her outside the show, 'cause that Toby would never, never come back to her. She felt that she must be able to drag him back; that she could not go on without him. She wanted to tell him how grateful she was for all his care of her. She thought of the thousand little things that she might have done for him. She longed to recall every impatient word to him. His gentle, reproachful eyes were always haunting her. "You must come back, Toby," she cried. "You must!"

It was only when body and mind had worn themselves out with yearning that a numbness at last crept over her, and out of this grew a gradual consciousness of things about her and a returning sense of her obligation to others. She tried to answer in her old, smiling way and to keep her mind upon what they were saying instead of letting it wander away to the past. Douglas and Mandy were overjoyed to see the color creeping back to her cheeks.

She joined the pastor again in his visits to the poor. The women of the

SHE HAD BEEN TAUGHT BY TOBY NEVER TO WHIMPER.

I knowed how you was allus a-feelin' 'bout her. I guess the 'leap-a-death' husband is goin' to jump his job soon, if he gets enough saved up, 'cause him an' Barker can't lift it off no more. We got a good deal o' trouble among the animals too. None o' the snakes is sheddin' like they ought to, an' Jumbo's a-carryin' a sixteen foot bandage around that trunk o' his'n 'cause he got too fresh with Trixy's grub the other night, an' the new giraffe got the croup in that seven foot neck o' his'n. I guess you'll think I got o'p for fair this time, so I'll just get on to myself now an' cut this short. I'll be writin' you ag'in when we hit Morgan-town.

"YOUR OLD MUVER JIM." Douglas laid the letter gently on the table, his hand still resting upon it. He looked helplessly at the little, shrunken figure in the opposite chair. Polly had made no sound, but her head had slipped lower and lower, and she now sat very quietly with her face in her hands. She had been taught by Toby and Jim never to whimper.

"Wid' a plucky they are!" thought Douglas as he considered these three lonely souls, each accepting whatever fate brought with no rebellion or even surprise. It was a strange world of stoics in which these children of the amusement arena fought and lost. They came and went like phantoms, with as little consciousness of their own best interests as of the great, moving powers of the world about them. They felt no throes of envy, no bitterness. They loved and worked and "went their way."

For once the pastor was powerless in the presence of grief. Both he and Mandy left the room quietly, feeling that Polly wished to be spared the outbursts of tears that a sympathetic word might bring upon her. They allowed her to remain alone for a time; then Mandy entered softly with a tender good night, and Douglas followed her cheerily as though nothing at all had happened.

It was many weeks before Polly again became a companion to Douglas and Mandy, but they did not intrude upon her grief. They waited patiently for the time when youth should again assert itself and bring back their laughing mate to them.

CHAPTER VIII.

W HEN Polly understood that Toby was actually gone it seemed to her that she could never laugh again. She had been too young to realize the inevitableness of death when it came to her mother, and now she could scarcely believe town would often see them passing and would either whisper to each other, shrug their shoulders or lift their eyebrows with smiling insinuations, but Polly and the pastor were too much absorbed in each other to take much notice of what was going on about them.

They had not gone for their walk today because Mandy had needed Polly to help make up the new giraffe's head in the Sunday school room to-night.

Early in the afternoon Polly had seen Douglas shut himself up in the study, and she was sure that he was writing, so when the village children stopped in on the way from school for Mandy's new made cookies she used her customary trick to get them away. "Tig; you're tig," she cried and then dashed out the back door, pursued by the laughing, screaming youngsters. Mandy followed the children to the porch and stood looking after them as the mad little band scurried about the back yard, darted in and out among the trees, then up the side of the wooded hill, just beyond the church.

The leaves once more were red and yellow on the trees, but today the air was warm and the children were wearing their summer dresses. Polly's little girlish figure looked almost tall by comparison with the children about her. She wore a plain, simple gown of white, which Mandy had helped her to make. It had been cut ankle length, for Polly was now seventeen. Her quaint, old fashioned manner, her serious eyes and her trick of knotting her heavy brown hair low on her neck made her seem older.

Mandy waited until the children had disappeared over the hill, then began bustling about, looking for the step-ladder which Hasty had left under the porch. It had been a busy day at the parsonage. A social always meant perturbation for Mandy. She called sharply to Hasty as he came down the path which made a short cut to the village.

"See's youse back, is yo'?" she asked sarcastically. "Sure 's back," answered Hasty good naturedly as he sank upon an empty box that had held some things for the social and pretended to wipe the perspiration from his forehead. "Mussa John done send yo' to de postoffice two hours ago," said Mandy as she took the letters and papers from his hand. "Five minutes is plenty ob time for any nigger to do dat job."

"You done been detain'd," Hasty drawled. "Youse always 'taind when dar's any work a-goin' on," Mandy snarped at him.

"What's Miss Polly?" Hasty asked, ignoring Mandy's reference to work.

"Nebber yo' mind 'bout Miss Polly. She don't want yo' Jes' yo' done fetch that step-ladder into de Sunday school room."

"But I wants her," Hasty insisted. "It's been on very 'ticular business what she ought to know 'bout."

"Business?" she repeated. "What kind ob business?"

"I got to fix de Sunday school room," said Hasty as he perceived her growing curiosity.

"You come heah, nigger," Mandy called, determined that none of the village dolts should escape her. "Out wid it!"

"Well, it's 'bout de circus," Hasty answered, seating himself again on the box. "Deys' showin' in Wakefield to-night, an' next month day's comin' here."

"Dat same circus what Miss Polly used to be wid?" Mandy's eyes grew large with curiosity.

"De very same," and Hasty nodded mysteriously.

"How yo' know dat?" Mandy was uncertain whether to believe him.

"'Cause dar's a big red wagon down-town wid de name ob de show painted on it. It's de advertisin' one what goes ahead wid all de pictures what dey pashed up."

"An' yo' been hangin' round dat wagon?"

"I done thought Miss Polly might want to know."

"See here, lazy nigger, don' yo' go puttin' no circus notions into Miss Polly's head. She don't care no more 'bout dem 'tins since her Uncle Toby done die. She done been satisfied right whar she am. Jes' yo' let her be."

"I ain't done nothin'," Hasty protested.

Father's Day.

(New York Times.)

Let us wear a white carnation.
For the dear old mother's sake;
She's the best of God's creation,
And as good as He can make;
But the fathers, plain and prosy,
Should be recognized some way,
For their lives are not so rosy.
But, like dogs, they need their day.
Not the sly dads or the fly dads,
Who when rocky grows the road,
Duties flouting, take an outing,
And let mother bear the load;
They deserve no compensation
But a cowhide or a goad.

Let us give some recognition
To the dads who, year by year,
Keep their posts with grim decision,
Loss of job their greatest fear.
They are working uncomplaining
In the mill and market place,
Just a modest living gaining,
As they keep their steady pace.
Not the club dads or the dud dads,
But the dads who, day by day,
Keep on working, never shirking,
And at night take home their pay.
They deserve some recognition,
Not one day, but every day.

Mrs. Lucy Duke died at the home of her brother, T. J. Leathers, near Stinnett, on May 19. The interment took place the following day at New Liberty burying ground. Deceased was about 65 years of age. She had been in poor health for sometime, but seemed to greatly improve and was able to travel around where she pleased. On the morning of her death she ate a hearty breakfast and shortly afterwards was taken suddenly ill and died in a few hours. She is survived by three daughters and two sons, who have the sympathy of all in their bereavement.

Decoration services will be held at Fair Mount Saturday, June 5.

MAKES FOR HEALTH

LET THE MEAL HOUR BE A PLEASANT ONE.

Then, of All Times, Gloom and Disagreement Should Be Banished--
--Good Cheer Is Active
Foe of Dyspepsia.

There are families who reserve all their unpleasantness for meal hours; they think it a convenient occasion to discuss things that have gone awry, to thrash out grievances, to dwell on disagreeable or gloomy subjects. If they but knew it they are courting dyspepsia more surely than if they indulged in mince pie or terrapin.

Haven't you gone to the table ravenous with hunger and find your appetite leave you in the face of a family quarrel? Who has not felt their food heavy after a meal hour of ructions? Yet how few blame it on its real cause, which is the interruption of digestion by mental agitation.

The meal hour should be the pleasantest hour in the day. It should be looked forward to rather than dreaded; and it will be if parents insist on each one being agreeable. Contribute to the family good cheer and dyspepsia will vanish.

To one household where meals had been constant turmoil, where food, health or the latest worry were the sole conversational efforts, came a woman with wholesome views on table cheer.

She directed the talk into agreeable channels, she exerted herself to be entertaining, until the captious family followed her lead. Finally they agreed on a fine for every unpleasant subject broached at meals.

Not only did the manners of that family improve, but also the general health. The children, from being easily sickened by their food, and constantly doctored for weak digestion, could eat anything with impunity.

Cheer during meals will do away with the need of digestive tablets. Make it a rule to come to the table smiling, and continue to smile though the food does not suit you and every one else is down on her luck. Your smile will prove contagious.

Good manners are desirable, but not so desirable as good health. If your child can only learn to eat well through constant nagging at meal time, better let it slip up in its table manners. Many children refuse to eat at table because their hunger is driven away by reproach.

A mother once complained to her doctor that her small son had no appetite; no matter how tempting the food, he could not eat it, though he seemed hungry between meals. The physician asked to be invited to lunch, which the child ate with the family.

At the close of the meal he said: "It is not your boy's digestion that is at fault, but his mother. Let that boy's manners alone. Stop your incessant 'Willie, your elbows,' 'do not smack your lips.' If you think he will not shine as a gentleman without such coaching take 15 minutes midway between meals for lessons in table breeding, but stop your nagging while he eats if you would not have a chronic dyspeptic."

Watch your table talk, keep it pleasant at any cost; learn to digest your food with laughter and light dyspepsia with cheerfulness, and not only will your home life be happier, but you will forget that weak stomach.

In palke d'Italie, with soft bows of black silk ribbon and a cluster of pale pink roses.

Guimpes of Fine Lace.

Guimpes of very fine laces deftly put together by hand are disputing place with the tucked net guimpes which have been positively epidemic. The carrying of the frock color on up to the chin through a net guimpe matching the frock is still an insistent note in French models, but the becoming white guimpe, though usually shrunken in size, has been demanded by so many sensible women that it has remained in the majority in spite of the fashion edict--From a Paris Letter to the American Register, London.

An Appeal to the Pride of the Owner of a Home

By The Red  Drug Store

Everyone who owns a home is anxious that that home shall make the best appearance possible. To make a proper selection of HOUSE PAINTS keep in mind the fact that the cost of labor of spreading the paint is the greatest item in the cost of re-painting. The price of house paints is therefore of no moment provided you will take Durability in consideration. It costs just as much to spread poor paint as it does to spread the best paint; consequently, the article which preserves your building for the longest period is the cheapest. The best paint is a

Pure Linseed Oil Paint

for Linseed Oil is the life-giving, preservative element; and combined with pigments which the manufacturer knows to be best adapted and most durable, makes the ideal product. You should see to it that when you buy paints and varnishes for your house, or any part of it, or when you give an order to your painter for any painting and varnishing you want done, that he uses the very best of paint. In large work it is always best to have a practical painter; but there are many little things about the house that you can readily finish yourself by using our ready-to-apply paints. Come in and have a little paint talk with us. Now is the time to "brighten up" your home. We can tell you the best product to use for any purpose you may have in mind and secure complete finishing sketches for you.

Come in and let us figure with you on your Paints, etc., before buying elsewhere. We have a complete line of Mixed Paints, White Lead and Varnishes of every description. In fact everything in the painting line. We handle nothing but the best of Paints and our prices are made to suit all.

Let us Figure with You Before Buying

There is a Satisfaction about a Well Painted House.

QUALITY Does It!

The best paint materials pure White Lead and Linseed Oil properly applied gives the house a finish that mixed paint will not. The quality lasts and serves both for looks and protection. We carry a full line of painting materials, all at the lowest prices. Call and let us figure on your job before buying and you will find us cheaper than any other house in this city.

To Keep Light Dresses Clean.

Magnesia may be obtained either in powder or in square cakes, and it is very effective in cleaning laces and delicate fabrics. Sift or rub it on the parts to be cleaned, and lay them away in a box or drawer where they will be undisturbed for a day or so, and then shake them out. It is a very good plan to apply the magnesia in this way when putting away party dresses that have become slightly soiled. The magnesia absorbs the dirt, and when you take the dresses out to wear them the next time, they will be fresh and dainty. The magnesia is also effective, when applied in the same way, for removing grease spots. Woman's Home Companion for June.

Chamberlain's Liniment.

This is a new preparation and a good one. It is especially valuable as a cure for chronic and muscular rheumatism, and for the relief from pain which it affords in acute inflammatory rheumatism. Those who have used it have invariably spoken of it in the highest terms of praise. Lame back, lame shoulder and stiff neck are due to rheumatism of the muscles, usually brought on by exposure to cold or damp, and are quickly cured by applying this liniment freely and massaging the affected parts. Soreness of the muscles, whether induced by violent exercise or injury, is allayed by this liniment. For sale by The Leo Haydon Drug Co.

Jackson Goes Fishing

By Lewis Worthington Smith

(Copyright, by J. B. Lippincott Co.)

For three summers Jackson had stayed at home during the vacation season, while Mrs. Jackson and the children went away to enjoy themselves. The fourth summer was now on hand, and again it was clear that all of them could not afford to go. The preceding year, while he kept busy at work at home and tried to satisfy himself with the few brief letters that his absorption in various recreating activities permitted Mrs. Jackson to write, he had concluded that another year he would take his turn. This decision had established itself permanently in his mind when for a whole week of that summer he had been without so much as a line from her, and now there was evidently nothing to do but inform her of his intention of taking a holiday and of taking it, by painful necessity, without her.

When he made the announcement Mrs. Jackson could not comprehend, could not believe him. She had been so long accustomed to thinking that she must have her summer outing whether the condition of their bank account permitted him to go, too, or not, that she could not at once adjust herself to any other way of seeing things. She protested; she came as near storming as her sense of personal dignity would permit; at length she even entreated; but by all of these things alike Jackson was unmoved.

Recognizing this finally, his wife acquiesced with the best grace possible, and by her own volition went to work getting things ready for the trip. The ability to surrender so delightfully as to seem to be conferring a favor was one of Mrs. Jackson's most valuable accomplishments. She chose that method of self-assertion now, and even in the triumph of his own purpose Jackson felt humble.

Before going he got together as many as he could find of the letters written him by Mrs. Jackson during her summer absences and packed them among the things that were to be always at hand during the trip. He meant to get something more than a vacation out of this business. This reflection gave him courage to be selfish in depriving his wife of a pleasure that her less self-sacrificing temperament certainly made it harder for her to give up than it had heretofore been for him.

Her very last injunction was one urging him to write often. He answered with cheery assurance that nothing on earth could keep him from doing that very thing.

When he had been in camp a week, he was very sure that it was time to send a letter to home. He had a great many things to say to Mrs. Jackson, too; but, in spite of that, he wrote briefly.

"Getting along finely. Caught a lot of fish to-day. Too tired to write any more. Don't worry about me." He smiled as he read the letter over before folding it up for the envelope, and he smiled again when he got her reply. She made no complaint, but he had learned to understand her feelings even by the nature of her silences.

On four days later, he wrote again: "Feeling better every day. I'm just as busy as I can be, and you will have to forgive me for not feeling like writing. If anything goes wrong, you'll hear from me in full. I hope you and the children are enjoying yourselves with me out of the way."

In reply Mrs. Jackson wrote a long letter—so long that she must have planned it for his humiliation, he thought. It was a perfect treasury of home information and of subtle suggestions touching the things he should or should not do to keep from getting sick. If he could have been sure that pure wife devotion inspired it, he should have been overwhelmed. As it was, he waited another four days and wrote again.

"Had the finest swim of my life to-day. Water just right. River beats all the bath-tubs ever heard of. Enjoying myself immensely and adding two years to my life. Don't worry about me because I don't write often. I simply have to make the most of the time I have."

Mrs. Jackson sent him a goodly body of ammunition at once. He must not stay in the water long at one time, because it is very exhausting. He ought not to go in at all because she did not know that he could swim. He must be careful to rub himself dry and to dress warmly afterward. She hoped that he was beginning to think of coming home.

Five days later he wrote again. "No bad effects from swimming. If I could stay here six weeks longer, I should be a new man. Would you use cream for a tanned back? I suppose you don't care to know the little things I do every day, and so I'll just tell you that I'm all right and quit."

In her next she said little more than it was very hot in the city and that she had given up trying to do much more than keep cool.

He wrote her a sympathetic letter almost at once. "I am sorry that the hot weather has come to town. We don't feel it out here, but I know enough about it to believe you without asking to have the thermometer there at the house sent down here for me to see. I had almost forgotten to tell you what a wonderfully cool place this is. We have to have a heavy blanket over us every night, and half the time during the day I am comfortable with a coat. There's a spring of the coldest water not ten feet from my tent, and the trees are as thick overhead as they say the stars are in the Milky Way. It's beautiful here, too. Any park you ever saw is a fancy-dry thing compared with this great wild country. I can't understand how I let myself stay in the city there during all these years. I hope Mildred is standing the hot weather all right. If either of the children should show any sign of being sick, telegraph for me at once."

He read this over with a smile. He hoped that it would make her just uncomfortable enough for her to understand some things that she had never seemed to see before. Undoubtedly it was not in the city, and this letter could hardly be expected to have any appreciable lowering influence upon the temperature.

She wrote at once, and her letter was both volatile and emphatic. She was utterly unable to understand what he meant by writing to her so seldom and so curtly. Did he think that business methods of correspondence were proper between husband and wife? Was she to stay home there in the heat and be neglected, while he did nothing but toss about in the water or sit on the bank watching a float—too lazy to give her a thought ten words long a day? She did not marry him in expectation of that kind of treatment, and she wanted it explained.

Fortunate it was for Jackson that he had the explanation ready—it did not need to be manufactured. He picked out a few of those old letters of hers and arranged them in order, writing across the face of each in blue pencil. Then he scrawled a brief note to accompany them.

"Perhaps my letters have not been what they should have been, but I really am not to blame. I have not written letters home for so long before this summer that I felt compelled to bring along some of your old ones as models for me to copy. I enclose them with explanatory annotation."

Jackson waited a few days for an answer, but when it came he was satisfied. Mrs. Jackson was not without a sense of humor, he knew, and she had doubtless seen the point and appreciated it. The letter, however, was short and did not say as much.

"I think that you are the meanest man I ever knew. When are you coming home?"

Nerve.

He was only a tramp, but he was there with the nerve. Entering the fashionable lunch parlor, he pompously seated himself at a table, devoured a pickle and dropped seven lumps of sugar and two biscuits into his coat pocket. Then he sampled the horse radish, drank a glass of water and glanced at the menu.

"Well?" snapped the tall waiter in the low-cut waistcoat.

"Well, howdy, pal!" called the stranger, affably. "What you got to eat?"

"Everything," responded the waiter, in icy tones.

"On my word! Got any Welsh rabbit?"

"Yes."

"How do you serve it?"

"Any way you want!"

The tramp moved his chair out a few inches.

"Well, give me the left hind foot, old sport. I want it for luck."

And helping himself to another biscuit, the tramp dodged a saucer and vanished into the night.

"America Needs More Dreamers."

Day dreams, castles in Spain, fragments of the imagination—ah, how we laugh at them all now! They are good enough for the little ones, for the boys and girls, perhaps, but as for us—we have long ago outgrown them. With what gusto we speak of So-and-So as a hard-headed chap, a money getter, while we dismiss his rival with a lift of the brows as "an impractical fellow."

Shame upon us for it, too! God give us more dreamers, I pray; more of those whose inner eye is free of catarrh. We need them here in America to-day; we are too practical a people. We are young in years, but we have fought an aging battle for the supremacy of a great continent. We have come up/out of the struggle with the rich trophies of victory, fast clutched in our calloused hands. We have worked desperately hard for them, and they are good to look upon—but we must have a care now lest we bow down before them in abject feticular worship.—Charles Francis Read, in Smart Set.

Talkative.

"I wouldn't object to be man dat keeps talkin' all de time," said Uncle Eben. "If he didn't ins't on th'ow'n in a question every ten minutes or so, dat 'd be 'g't to answer to show 'yos keepin' awake."—Washington Star.

VALLEY HILL.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Reed are receiving congratulations over the arrival of a twelve pound son on the 17th inst. Mother and babe are progressing nicely. Mrs. M. Reed spent several days with relatives at Booker last week.

Mr. I. L. James, of Springfield, was in our midst Wednesday.

Little Miss Willie May Reed visited her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. M. Reed, of this place, last week.

J. S. Yankey purchased a bunch of fat ewes from J. L. Moran Thursday.

Miss Nannie Pinkston, of Poortown, was in our midst Thursday.

W. F. Moran was in Springfield Wednesday on business.

Walter Briggs visited his sister, Mrs. Jack Shehan, of near Bloomfield, the latter part of last week.

Meadames M. Reed and W. F. Moran visited Mrs. Thos. Reed at Booker Thursday.

Mrs. S. E. Piles, who has been ill for several months, is convalescing slowly at this writing.

Mr. Frank Noe, of Springfield was in our village Thursday on business.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Whiteman returned to their home here Saturday, after an extended visit to relatives in Pulaski county.

Several from here attended the ball game at Poortown Saturday.

Arthur Whiteman visited relatives near Mackville Saturday and Sunday.

Miss Sue Williams has been visiting her grandmother, Mrs. Eliza Mitchell, at Hardesty, the past two weeks.

Jas. Moran, Jr., and brother, were in Springfield Saturday, on business.

Your correspondent had the misfortune of having his buggy too badly mutilated last Saturday by the restlessness of his driving horse, which plunged into a gate lever tearing the top out of the buggy top from Genesis to Revelations.

Several from here attended the closing sermon at Mt. Zion last Sunday.

Mrs. Palmer Groatley and Rev. Hamilton attended church in Springfield Sunday.

Miss Bessie Roberts, of Springfield, is the guest of Miss Pearl Groatley, of this place, this week.

H. M. Groatley was a guest at Elm Hill Sunday.

Mr. Robert Snider, who has been ill for several months is slowly improving and we wish for him a speedy recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. E. I. Colvin, of Litsay, visited relatives here Sunday.

Rev. Hamilton, of Woodlawn, recently ordained as a minister from the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary at Louisville, delivered a very interesting sermon at the schoolhouse at this place on last Sunday afternoon, to a large and appreciative audience. He will conduct a series of meetings here during the next ten days, and everyone is cordially invited to attend each evening.

Miss Pearl Groatley closed a very successful two months term of school at this place on last Friday. Miss Groatley is a very popular and efficient teacher, and her excellent teaching is commended by all. As yet we have not learned who the successful aspirant for the fall school will be.

The continued tobacco season of last week enabled many tobacco growers to set out a portion of their crop. Others were not so lucky as to have early plants and consequently had to reluctantly pass by the excellent season.

Mr. J. H. Morris, state agent for Rand-McNally's condensed wall atlas and map of the world, was in our section Wednesday and made several sales. His work is indeed commendable to those educationally inclined.

Orchard and Garden.

Keep hoes sharp with a file.

Make three successive plantings of sweet corn this month, at ten-day intervals.

Never pick berries for market when they are wet. And, when picked, hurry them to a cool place out of the sun.

Cut off, at any time, any suckers you may find growing at the foot of fruit trees or on the trunk or main limbs where branches should not grow.

Muzzle the horses and pad the outside portions of whiffletrees and harrow when cultivating the orchard, thus avoiding all bruised and "barked" trees.

Pay an occasional friendly visit to the little trees set this spring. Rub off unnecessary sprouts; and make sure that no label wires have been left on the trees to choke them.

Watch for the little slugs—darkish, slimy fellows—that are likely to be on pear or cherry leaves now. Fine, dry dust, if thrown in the trees, will kill every slug it covers. Or almost any of the regulation orchard sprays will exterminate the pest.

One ounce of California buhach dissolved in three gallons of water is a good, non-poisonous spray application for cabbage worms and lice. The imported "Persian insect powder" is the same thing, but is not so fresh and effective as the California article.

Cabbage and other plants can be protected from cutworms by erecting a two-inch-high paper fence around each stem. Lap the paper ends and push the "fence" an inch into the soil to hold it in place. The paper should not come nearer to the stem than about one and one-half inches.

The asparagus beetle is a troublesome pest, not easy to control, says Rural New-Yorker. Chickens are fond of them and will rid garden beds of the adults, but, of course, can be of little benefit in large fields. Clean cutting, especially in ridge culture, keeps them under control in spring, but the slugs or larvae do considerable damage later.

Don't forget to keep picking the cucumbers as they ripen. Look through the vines carefully (they have a great way of hiding in the leaves), so that none will be overlooked; for two or three large ones going to seed will sap all the strength of their vine, whereas in picking them right along new ones will form, and a continued supply be secured.

The Bordeaux mixture is the proper remedy to use for all fungus troubles; viz., mildew and rust of beans; potato and tomato rot and leaf-blight; melon and cucumber diseases; celery leaf-blight and rust, etc. The half-strength mixture (two pounds copper sulphate, two pounds quicklime, fifty gallons water) is strong enough to use in the vegetable garden, except for potatoes.

Look out for the striped beetles. They often attack and destroy melons and cucumbers as fast as the plants appear above the ground. An application of wood-ashes, air-slaked lime, or gypsum, tainted with kerosene or turpentine or carbolic acid, will help to drive them away. If you have only a few plants, you can easily protect each hill by erecting a mosquito netting guard over it until the plants begin to run.

There are three common methods of growing strawberries,—in hills, in narrow matted rows, or in wide matted rows. We prefer the second method. Arrange the first strong runners by hand, spacing them properly and securing each one in place with a little soil or a small stone. Then, when each row is full, cut off all additional runners that may grow. Keep the ground hoed and cultivated until late fall. The finished row should not be wider than fifteen or eighteen inches.

Mr. J. E. Shewmaker and family were the guests of Mrs. John Shewmaker Sunday.

Miss Louise Fenwick spent the latter part of last week with her brother, Mr. Lloyd Fenwick, of the ridge.

Misses Ethel and Verna Rogers were the guests of their cousin, Miss Mary Rose Jones, Friday night.

SENATOR CHARLES DICK.

A SUBLIME SUMMONS

A Story of Turkey and the Sultan

Dr. Jani was in prison in Stamboul, he did not know why. All he had been able to learn from the guards was that he had been arrested by the orders of the sultan. He had protested innocence of all wrong-doing, but without avail. He had begged for time to put his affairs in order, to write a few notes to friends, to communicate with the ambassador or with the consul, to send a telegram. No, all he was to do was to go with the guards who had taken him directly to the prison and locked him up with no hint of why or wherefore.

He could not so much as guess why he was there. But then there had been others. He remembered them well. Montnet, the oriental scholar who had lived in peace for years and suddenly had been summoned to be seen no more among his friends nor even heard of by them. There was Salomo who never had returned from the ride he started out upon one afternoon, though his household waited days and weeks and months. Then there was Morelli, the musician, and little Grigo, who every one had loved, whose life had all joy and merriment, but who had vanished like the others as though changed to air.

Now his turn had come, and why? He could think of nothing whatever that could have offended anyone holding authority in Stamboul.

With his elbows on the rough table before him, he looked back to the day when first he saw the Theophrastus Bosphorus. He had come for a month's holiday, and the magic scenery, with its infinity of panoramas, had bewitched him. The one month had lengthened into 12, and the artist in him had been supremely happy. As a physician, too, he had been attracted by Stamboul, but from a very different reason than that which had attracted the artist, namely, the city's filth. Where there was so much filth there must be diseases, probably strange diseases that western Europe knew nothing of. He had stayed on account of this filth, and his reward had been ample, as medals and diplomas in his quarters showed.

The literature of the east had been another charm to hold him. He had delighted in it and had translated much. He also had had some western stories into Arabic, and had won distinction by so doing.

But it was all done now. His laboratory work, his pictures, his studies and translations were of the time that was been. He should never see his manuscripts or be in his beloved studio again. He like those others whom he had been thinking of had come to the end. He might have known it. He had been a fool—but why? Why? Why? He asked himself with a sort of madness over again and again, why? Why should it be? What had he done? Was he not useful? Had he not done good? Had he not saved lives? He had. He had saved many lives. He had taught the people how they might save themselves when diseases came. He had been the friend of all, and had never so much as thought of politics or uttered a word about the state.

He pressed his hands to his head and tried once more to think, starting at the dull blank wall before him. Then the door of the cell opened and an officer came in.

"You are Dr. Jani," he inquired.

"I am, but—"

"You have been translating a story from the French, which has been running as a serial in the Weekly Crescent?"

"I have been translating a story from the French, a romance, in which there is not one word that could give offense, not a word that is—"

"As before he was interrupted."

"I am commanded by the sultan," said the officer, "that you are to remain here until the translation is finished."

"I am commanded by the sultan," said the officer, "that you are to remain here until the translation is finished."

Biliousness and Constipation.

For years I was troubled with biliousness and constipation which made life miserable for me. My appetite failed me. I lost my usual force and vitality. Pepsin preparations and cathartics only made matters worse. I do not know where I should have been to-day had I not tried Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. The tablets relieve the ill feeling at once, strengthen the digestive functions, purify the stomach, liver and blood, helping the system to do its work naturally.—MRS. ROSA POTTS, Birmingham, Ala. These tablets are for sale by The Leo Haydon Drug Co.
